In warm countries, where the winters are not very long or very cold, hibernation (冬眠) is not necessary. And in very cold parts of the world, like the far north of Russia, not many animals hibernate. The ground is so hard that they cannot make a deep hole to spend the winter. But animals in a large part of the northern hemisphere (北半球) spend every winter fast asleep.

A bear is a half-hibernating animal. A she-bear chooses her place much more carefully to spend the winter because she is likely to have cubs (小熊) in it. She keeps as much food as possible in it. She sleeps until January, when the cubs are born. Even then she doesn't try to come out of hibernation. The cubs stay with her. They drink her milk and grow bigger and stronger week by week until spring arrives.

To keep the milk supply (供应), the she-bear eats the food from her secret stores (仓库).
